What is an LPA?

A Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA) is the way to ensure that the people you trust will be able to take important decisions on your behalf if you become mentally or physically incapable of doing so for yourself.

While LPAs are most often used to deal with the affairs of the elderly, if they are prepared much earlier in life they will give the same protection in the event of incapacity as a result of illness or accident.

Replacing Enduring Powers of Attorney

LPAs replaced Enduring Powers of Attorney (EPAs) from the beginning of October 2007.

The basic difference between the two is that while an EPA only enables other people to act on your behalf in relation to financial and property matters, an LPA can also enable them to act in relation to health and welfare decisions.

Who takes responsibility?

Making an LPA does not restrict your right to control your affairs for as long as you feel able. The appointment of an Attorney means that there is someone to take over if, and when, you cannot cope. At any time you may ask your Attorney to take responsibility for various aspects of your affairs.

What do LPAs cover?

There are two types of LPA, a Property and Affairs LPA and a Personal Welfare LPA.

Property and Affairs LPA

A Property and Affairs LPA gives your chosen attorney(s) authority to deal with your property and finances as you specify.

Personal Welfare LPA

A Personal Welfare LPA allows your chosen attorney(s) to make welfare and health care decisions on your behalf, only when you lack mental capacity to do so yourself. This could also extend, if you wish, to giving or refusing consent to the continuation of life-sustaining treatment.

Existing EPAs

If you have an existing EPA then this remains valid during your lifetime unless you revoke it, but you can no longer make a new one. You may wish to consider making a Personal Welfare LPA to complement your existing EPA.

From both a practical and financial point of view it makes sense for everyone to consider appointing an Attorney under an LPA before a problem arises. Once a person becomes unable to manage, it may be too late to make an LPA.

If you have already made a Will then an LPA will complement this and help to reassure both you and your family that you have made detailed plans for the future.

Choosing your attorneys

You will wish to choose people you trust completely and are over 18. An attorney under a Property and Affairs LPA should not be bankrupt. People usually choose their spouse and often their children, and other relatives or close friends.

An alternative is to choose a professional person such as a solicitor. If you appoint more than one person you will need to decide whether they are to act 'together' or 'together and independently'.

Together

Together means that they must all sign everything; this can help to ensure that the right decisions are made but may not always be practical depending on your choice of attorneys.

Together and Independently

Together and independently means that they can either act together or individually.

When does a LPA become active?

Your attorney(s) will only be able to act once the LPA has been signed by you and your attorney(s), and certified by a suitable person that you have not been pressured into making the Power.

It also has to be registered with the Office of the Public Guardian before it can be used.

Limitations

An attorney cannot, without authority from the Court of Protection, make a Will for you. You should ensure that you have an appropriate Will in place.

There are also strict rules governing gifts by attorneys. A specialist solicitor will be able to advise you.

No LPA or EPA?

If you lose the capacity to make a financial decision, and have not made an LPA or EPA, it may be necessary for an application to be made to the Court of Protection for an appropriate order to enable someone to act on your behalf. This can be costly, time consuming and stressful for family members.

Caring for others

If you know someone or find yourself caring for someone unable to deal with their own affairs it would be sensible for that person to make an LPA and you should mention this to them.

Generally speaking it is worth planning ahead. When someone becomes incapable of managing their affairs it can be a very difficult time both for them and their family and friends. However, only the person making the LPA can give instructions.
